

Preventive Dentistry Practice of the Year

Vote for your favourite practice

The judges have shortlisted two practices for Preventive Dentistry Practice of the Year and the winner is up to you. The next few pages will give you a profile on the two practices we have chosen

The Preventive Dentistry Practice of the Year Award is designed to recognise the UK practice with the strongest, best established and well thought out preventive ethos, whether it be NHS, private or mixed. As a team, they will successfully communicate the oral health message to their patients, and will work together to raise oral health standards and regard prevention as their number one priority above all else.

The judges

An independent panel of judges including members of the Preventive Dentistry editorial board has chosen 'Waterside Dentalcare' in Cornwall and 'The Craigentiny Dental Health Centre' in Edinburgh as the two finalists. Preventive Dentistry would like to thank you all the entries submitted – we were inundated with exceptional practices, but the judges felt that the two chosen finalists delivered that something extra in the field of prevention.

How to vote

All you need to do to vote is email your preferred practice to versha.miyanger@fmc.co.uk. The winner will be published in the next issue of Preventive Dentistry. Votes need to be submitted by Monday 2nd April. Please add your name and the name of your practice.

The prize

The practice lucky enough to win, will be exposed as an example of excellence to dental practitioners up and down the country. The practice will also win £500 to spend as you wish. This Award will help get the practice the recognition it deserves.
